

Kevin is a proud father; devoted husband of 33 years; Air Force combat veteran who fought in the Gulf War; and a two-term City Councilmember representing one of the fastest growing areas in Arizona.

As a mechanical engineer, Kevin worked 17 years in the utility industry, overseeing the installation of natural gas distribution pipelines and working with local governments to provide service to their residents. As a Councilmember, Kevin is responsible for the municipal public utilities that provide electric, natural gas, water and sewer services in Mesa, ensuring customers have reliable service at just and reasonable utility rates. Kevin has the real experience you need and deserve in an Arizona Corporation Commissioner.

We need responsible leaders who are willing to protect consumers, protect our businesses, and ensure Arizona maintains a strong and reliable energy grid. As your Commissioner, Kevin will put Arizona First and fight against bad policies that are trying to find their way into Arizona such as California-style and Green New Deal style policies. These are tried and failed policies that would drive up energy costs and de-stabilize our grid.

It's time for experienced leadership that represents and protects the people of Arizona!
